Sara lives in a small town by the sea. Every morning, she wakes up early to listen to the sound of the waves. From her window, she can see fishing boats moving slowly across the water. Her father works on one of those boats. He catches fish and brings them to the market before noon. When the sea is stormy, Sara feels worried about her father, but she never says it aloud.

After school, Sara and her friends like to walk along the beach. They collect seashells and build sandcastles. They care about their country, so sometimes they help clean the beach by picking up bottles and papers. Their teacher told them that keeping the sea clean helps sea animals live safely. Sara always feels proud when the beach looks clean again.
